In a late case of Chifoonga gambling tried by Mr. Reily, two Chinamen, masters of the house, were severely punished (both by fine and imprisonment). It appears they appealed to the High Court, as I was told, and that honourable Court raled "that Chifoenga was not gambling, but a lettery" (fair or unfair, honest or dishonest, not dwelt upon), and mitigated their sentence. But from my experience of the game, and from authentic accounts as to its origin, I think that Chifoonga is not only gambling, but gambling of the most nefarious and lowest description, leave von and your numerous readers to decide after perugal of its history and I trust that these lines will fall under the eyes of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor Bengal, a great aim of whose administration has been to suppress gambling of all description, so that he may be pleased to promulgate an Act to make gambling extinct in the locality of China-A Chinese nobleman, named Chi-chong, came from Chinese Tartary to Canton in search of a wife in 1840; and he married one Miss Foongbey, the only daughter of a Chinese philosopher, and settled down at that seaport town. The beauty, virtue, and learning of Foonghey were hinged on the wings of extravagance, and in the course of about a dozen and a-half summers Chi-chong was a ruined man-perfect bankrupt—but he being overfond of his wife would not let her know the state of his affair. In 1860, on pretence of seeing a very near and dear relative, he sailed for California to try his luck in the diggings and thus retrieve his lost wealth. Scarcely had Chi-chong sailed through Chinese waters, when Foundhey sold some of her rich dresses and trinkets, bired a house in the most populated part of the town, and opened a Chifoongha gambling-house. FRENCH TRAVELLERS IN CENTRAL ASTA:

Messrs. Capus and Bonvalot the French travellers, wrote the following letter to the French Geographical Society from Samarcand, under date Nov. 6 last:- "We set out on April 27 from Teheran for Meshed in a carriage hired from certain Tartars. A strong vehicle and hardened drivers were rendered necessary by the character of our route, which was very difficult at places. Sometimes it is out by large rivers with rocky beds, sometimes by canals which carry water into the rare esses cattered along the foot of the Elburz chain. As many travellers have followed it, it passes for being well known, and, generally speaking, much trouble is not taken either to observe it carefully or to describe it in detail. It is given, however, the sonerous title of the 'Imperial route.' This it does not deserve. It follows the foot of the mountains to Shah-rud, Sabzawar, and Nishapur. In this region we were almost always on the steppethat is, on the border of a vust expanse which is the 'Khevir,' or Great Salt Desert. A large quantity of ealt crystals are scattered over the surface, and these are composed particularly of sods and magnesis, which often turn the water bad and render cultivation impossible. The very names of some of the villages declare the evils of the situation. The flora, fauna, and geology are the same as those of the desert, thus establishing their identity with Central Asia. Not a tree, not even a shrub, if we except the fruit trees of the orchards and a few willows and poplars which grow beside the canals, lightens the landscape. From the bridge of Mandjil to the Tian Shan, going from west to east, not a single forest is known. The towns of Northern Persia are destitute of character. A few rained mosques, some fine but notched minarets, attract the attention of the historian, and prove to him that the finest monuments of Asia date no further back than the Mongol dominion. Bestan is the most interesting of these towns, for it preserves some relics of these ancient times, and, among others, hasband's names, is braced in it, means literally an architectural curiosity of a shaking minaret -" cheat, or trick you out of four"-through its of the character of those one sees at Ispahan. menner of playing. POST-OFFICE NOTICES.

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addresses need do is to note on the cover. Sent to --- , or Received at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it. without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster-General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end. LOCAL DELIVERY-No delivery is attempted on board Ship, at the Peak, Kowloon, Aberdeen, &c., nor at any private house (even though named in the address) when there is a place of business nearer at which delivery can be effected
